Wounded Warriors Penn Mega Raffle

By Dwayne Patenaude

As restrictions have eased rolling into November, Tackle Days at Fishermans Landing was okayed by the County. Nobody knew what the reaction would be as this would be the first large event for the fishing industry since the shutdown here in San Diego. The club was running the casting contest, and we asked Doug if the San Diego Anglers Foundation could set up our booth next door and sell Mega raffle tickets for 5 Penn rod and reel combos. A $10 ticket for a chance to win about $2200 in rods and reels from Penn, all the proceeds going toward taking the wounded warriors fishing in 2021. We had to dodge the rain a few times for a few minutes, but the event was a huge success. We ended up selling all 350 tickets that we printed for the event, all in one day! Wow. Because we sold them all out, we decided to pull the ticket right there. When then Friends of Rollo raffle was over at the end of the day, the crowd drifted over to the Foundation booth. The wheel was spun, Jill reached in, mixed up the tickets some more, dug deep and pulled the winning ticket. "Is Robert Wong here?" He was, along with his wife and 3 kids visiting from Las Vegas. Pictures were taken, and a family won a quiver of 5 Penn rods and reels, Penn Slammer III 3500 spinning reel, Star drags of Fathom 15, and a 25N and 2-Two Speed reels (Fathom 25N and Fathom 40N) all attached to Penn Carnage rods.

We would like to thank everyone who came down to support the wounded warrior program by purchasing tickets. It was such a success that if the Fred Hall show will be allowed to be outdoors at the fair grounds, we will try to do it again!

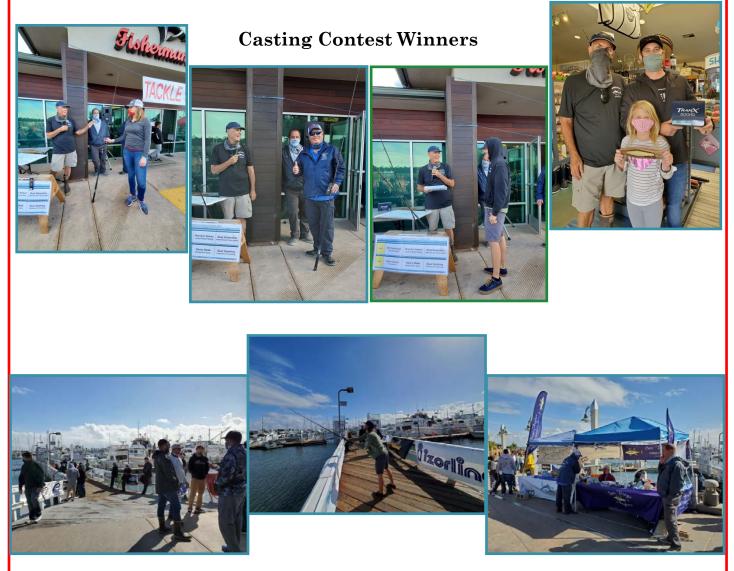

Tackle Days

By: Debbie Patenaude

On November 7th, Fisherman's Landing Tackle Days proved to be an adventure. There was an outstanding turnout considering the periodic rainstorms that soaked us. The wind had the rain blowing sideways and sent everyone running for cover. Even with that, there was a merry atmosphere and the afternoon cleared up. The San Diego Anglers were in charge of the casting contest for the landing, Thank You Jim Medlin for running this part of our day. Lots of would-be winners lined up to try their hand at the longest cast. This year Doug Kern spiced things up by adding a Junior and Ladies category. The competition was tough, but the longest cast was 87 yards. Not an easy feat! Thank you to Shimano for the prizes.

We were lucky enough to have a double booth this year and share it with our San Diego Anglers Foundation. Dwayne and Jill were busy selling raffle tickets to support the Foundation events for 2021, while Carol Asbury and myself answered club questions and took membership renewals.

Thank you to Rich Rodriguez for spotting the casting lengths, to Dave Hanes and David Ameika for racing back and forth with the spotter flag, and to Ray Broadfoot and Andrew Hauser for taking names and keeping social distancing in the line.

2020 10-Day "Vagabond" Trip

By Debbie Patenaude

When Covid hit this Spring, nobody knew how it would affect the sportfishing industry. As the data grew, it become evident that close quarters with people was a problem. People started to bale from the trip in reaction to the info. As the summer progressed, it became evident the virus was difficult to spread in an outdoor situation like the deck of a boat. Restrictions were lifted by late June and the industry was opened back up again. We tried hard to fill the vacancies, but people still had concerns, and I don't blame them one bit. But a contract was signed and we were going. Mike suggested, for peace of mind, a Covid test be performed on everyone that was going by Friday before we left and then everyone self-quarantine until Monday morning, when we left. All tested negative.

When Monday morning rolled around, the 12 remaining people gathered at Point Loma Sportfishing. Most of us had not seen each other for months, so it was a happy reunion. We loaded on the boat with our usual ton of stuff, mostly wahoo stuff, and headed out to get bait. The crew went through the Covid requirements on masks, eating in the galley, spacing, bunkrooms, etc., as okayed by San Diego County, and we loaded our bait. Captain Mike said we would start the trip by gathering flying fish at San Clemente Island and then head west to the Tanner Bank (another 50 miles to the west). The fishing for the big bluefin had been spectacular recently, and we were about to find out. These fish had been caught on flyers in the daytime and flatfalls, at night. We were loaded for bear, to say the least with the Vagabond supplying all the Penn kite gear (200 lb Spectra with 400lb leader wound on Penn International reels and Calstar rods). The fishing was spectacular as we all watched the 2 kite rigs that were deployed get exploded on by giant fish every 20 minutes or so. We had fish going all the time. As your rotation spot came up, you waited in a designated spot by the kite rod and waited for Mike to deploy the flyer. Sometimes it was only out a few minutes before it was exploded on, like a mine going off under the bait. It was amazing, to say the least. We were all spectators as we waited our turn. The best bite was just as the sun went down. Norm Campbell was up to bat. His fish fought him into the dark, and after an hour, with Mike maneuvering the boat to keep it straight up and down. they sunk the gaffs into a monster which taped out at about 350 lbs. WOW as this fish was a pig and we all went into the galley to lick or wounds, take Advil, apply Ben Gay or what ever it took to make the muscles feel better.

During dinner, while watching the World Series, Mike came down from the wheelhouse (we were drifting in the dark) to let us know that if anyone was interested, there was a ton of 100-to -200 lb. fish right under the boat that you could drop a flatfall on. Nobody budged as they were tired, with some already taken showers and were in clean clothes. A second plea came from Mike about 30 minutes later that the fish were even thicker. Nobody moved as the Series was pretty exciting. The game finally ended a short time later, and I ventured out as it was only about 7 :00 or so. I dropped a flatfall and hooked up immediately on the first drop. Paul comes out, drops his flatfall and gets ripped right under the boat. two are now on, and the excitement was about to begin again. Pretty soon everyone was back to fishing, convincing the freshly showered and clean-clothed anglers to change out and join the party. When it was all said and done, we put bluefin up to 220 lbs on the deck that night. It was pretty insane.

We did not know what was in store for us the next day. I rolled out of bed after the sun came up ,and no one was fishing. Mike was eating breakfast in the galley. I asked what was going on, and they said we needed a little more wind to get the kite up. I sat down with Mike and asked if the fished stayed with the boat all night long. He just smiled and said we were surrounded by tons of 200-300 pounders circling the boat. I kind of felt like Custer at that point! Little did we know what was in store for us. Typically, they fish two kite rods: one in the bow, one in the stern. We would not need the bow setup today. The first bait Mike deployed got exploded on while letting it out. He put out another bait - same thing: instant explosion by the boat. We all stood in amazement as these monster tuna stood in their own line under the boat, just waiting for us to put another bait out. We could not get the bow rod out as all deck hands were up at this point keeping the chaos on the deck manageable. And Mike just kept the fish coming. It was an orchestra on the boat and Mike was the conductor. It was amazing. By midday, we caught our limits, and many quit fishing. Debbie got a personal best 280-pounder and said to everyone, "I'm done!. I can't do this again." Many had the same sentiment, so we packed it in and left them biting for the next boat.

We turned toward Alijos rocks, where we would try for Wahoo. It was a two-day journey with great seas, and we all prepared for our next chapter of the trip. Mike said the sharks had been real bad down there, eating most of the Wahoo hooked. He would try to get us one Wahoo each. We arrived at the rocks and started hooking Wahoo immediately. There did not seem to be any shortage of Wahoo. Nor sharks. We did our best and maybe boated 15 Wahoo before the sun went down. We woke up to the same thing the next day, and Mike decided to make a little move to a bank that is about 10 miles or so to check it out. We got down there and immediately hooked up. Lots of sharks, but they did not seem to be as aggressive, allowing many Wahoo to reach the gaff. As the morning went on, the fishing got better and better. I think I got 7 on then the bomb that day with no losses to the sharks. And then right in the middle of a great Wahoo bite we got attacked. We could not get a bait out to the Wahoo. No, not sharks, but marlin. A school of marlin found us, and we had many hookups going at the same time. They were swimming around the boat, all lit up in blue. If you wanted to fight a marlin, they were there for the picking. I even hooked one on the bomb. We had fun for about an hour, hooting and hollering as they would greyhound after hooking up. They finally left us so we could get back to our job at hand: Wahoo. We ended up with about 60, way more than any other boat fishing for them. We were very grateful that the sharks did not eat breakfast and lunch that day !

Mike heard of the big wind that was expected, and we were about 200 miles offshore and he did not want to get stuck out there. We hightailed it for the beach and got there just in time. Mike went to one of his honey holes next to shore. We had a choice: yellows out the back or calicos off the starboard side. It was pretty wide open for us for two days, bait or iron. They were gobbling the surface iron pretty good. At one point I had to put down my surface iron rod as my arms were sore from catching yellows. "I know, I will rest by throwing a Hook-up bait for bass." That was a lot of fun until a yellow grabbed the Hook-up bait on my medium spinning outfit. Everything was fine and then I felt a thump on my rod, and in about 6 seconds I lost all my line on my reel. POW went the knot. Mike walked up and said I hooked one of his pet groupers. It came up and ate my yellow while I was fighting it. Same thing happened to Kezele about an hour later: He hooked a yellow on a surface iron, was finishing the fight, and he hooked something large that spooled him.

San Diego Angler David Ameika Sets World Record

By Andrew Hauser

Club member David Ameika not only beat the previous world record but he destroyed it. When on the clubs ten day "Vagabond" charter David decided he was going to get himself a world record fish. With monster Bluefin being caught, giant Yellowtail coming over the rail, and huge world-class Wahoo coming over the rail, David knew this trip was going to be the trip that was going to get him that world-record fish. After catching triple-digit-sized Bluefin, David went on the hunt for massive wahoo down by Alijos Rocks. He saw the world record fish free swimming and knew he was in the right zone but just couldn't connect with the right one after three days of trying. Heading back up the line, David knew the best water to catch that record fish was still to some. As the "Vagabond" positioned itself on the high spot, David knew this was his last shot, so he rigged up his "all tackle" dropper-loop setup. It didn't take long for huge yellowtail to come over the rail, but that wasn't what David was looking for. He was on the search for that Starry Rockfish. Bam bam his rod tip twitches, and he knew he had the right kind. Pulls it over the rail and just shy of the current record, so he rebaited and sends it back down. Bam bam, the rod tip twitches, and he knew this was the one he was looking for. By now the crowd has gathered around him, watching as he pulls this world record fish over the rail. The crowd erupted with cheers as emotions flood David senses. He did it folk!!!! He set the igfa world record for Starry Rockfish with a whopping 3.6lbs. Some would say this was the story of David vs Goliath. Great job, David!

Cancelled 2021 San Diego Anglers Open Bay Bass Tournament

By Dwayne Patenaude

IMPORTANT NOTICE: The Port of San Diego contacted the club in September, telling us that they would get back with us in November on the permissibility of next year's Bay Bass Tournament because of the virus. Well, it is official now: All events surrounding the bay have been officially cancelled through March 1, 2021. We will plan for the OBB Tournament in 2022 and are hoping that it will be safe enough to do it then.
